CHAIR ERGONOMICS

If you sit behind a desk for hours at a time, you're not doomed to live with neck and back pain or sore wrists and fingers. Proper office ergonomics, including correct chair height, adequate equipment spacing and good desk posture, can help you and your joints stay comfortable at work.

Choose a chair that supports your spinal curves. Adjust the height of your chair so that your feet rest flat on the floor or on a footrest and your thighs are sloping slightly forward.

NEUTRAL POSTURE

The body is most comfortable when the joints are in the balanced or 'neutral' posture.

HIGHER HIPS

Your hips should be higher than your knees with a forward sloping thigh.

NO PRESSURE POINTS

The seat should have a pronounced waterfall edge with no pressure points on the seat or the backrest.

BALANCED SPINE

When working, the spine should be balanced and able to reach the backrest.

SUPPORTIVE BACKREST

The backrest should be supportive and follow the natural curves of the spine. Support should start at the pelvis and include the lumbar spine and the midback.

HEADREST

Supports the back of the head and the upper neck, reducing tension in the shoulders and upper torso.
